Change is made by those who show up!

Your elected officials represent you, but they can’t do this effectively if they don’t know what you want.

This booklet offers examples of ways to become a trusted resource for legislators and other elected officials on issues that affect your life.

These are tried and true methods for successful advocacy. Take that first step to write a letter or email, make a phone call, attend a reception or an Advocacy Day.

It’s about building a relationship with those who make decisions that affect your life. Lawmakers look to their constituents for reliable information on issues before them.

With so many issues to learn about including education, health care, transportation, the economy, state institutions versus community services—your knowledge of developmental disabilities helps them to do their job!
Be A Resource

There’s a fine line between keeping your legislators current on developing issues and over-working your relationship with too much repetition.

If you keep in regular contact with your legislators, be sure to always provide fresh, useful information, such as the status of a bill or budget item on which you need their support or assistance.

Legislation changes often and quickly throughout the session, as other interest groups weigh in and amendments are made. Be sure to stay on top of these changes and...

TAKE ACTION

- Attend Advocacy Day
- Join a local advocacy group such as a parent coalition or self-advocacy organization
- Visit The Arc of Washington State’s Online Action Center: www.arcwa.org

Amendment: Bills are often changed through amendments. Sometimes the changes are minor, but sometimes they are drastic enough to entirely alter the intent of the legislation.

Dropped: When a bill is introduced, it is “dropped in the hopper” at the code reviser’s office located on the Capitol campus.

Hopper: This is an actual box at the code reviser’s office in which bills are dropped. It looks like a mail slot in the wall.

Executive Session: After a bill is “heard” the committee takes a vote. This executive session can occur days or weeks after the hearing.

Floor: The full chamber of either the House or Senate. It’s where legislators vote as a whole.

Hearing: A committee “hears” public testimony from citizens, agencies and professional lobbyists who explain why a bill is good, bad or in need of amendments.

Pull: Can refer to pulling a legislator off the floor or it can refer to an action in Rules Committee in which a member is allowed to pull a bill to the floor for a vote.

Sine Die: (Without Day) The final adjournment of a legislative session, without adjourning to a specific time or date.

We’re Here to Help YOU

Impacting government may feel overwhelming no matter how long you’ve been advocating, but others are available to guide you along the way.

From parent coalitions and self advocacy organizations to state and local Arc chapters – we’re here to help you have a voice. It only takes a few simple steps to get into the action:

Be informed. Sign up for Olympia Insider email updates, Olympia Reporter, Twitter updates, our Action Network and join The Arc’s Facebook group. (See page 11).

Get connected. Join a chapter of The Arc, a parent coalition, self advocacy or other group that holds the same interests, goals and values you do.

Take action. Visit The Arc of Washington State’s Online Action Center, attend town hall meetings and legislative receptions, participate in Advocacy Day, make phone calls, write emails and visit your legislators in person. (Action tips are provided throughout this booklet.)

What You Don’t Know Won’t (necessarily) Hurt You

Sometimes, a legislator or aide may ask for information that you do not have (such as data or charts). Not only is it okay to say you don’t know, it is the very best response you can give!

As a constituent, it’s not your job to understand or have access to information that agencies and professional advocates have.

Stick to what you know best — your life. You are the expert in telling your story and how it relates to decisions being made by lawmakers.

Instead of guessing, say you don’t know; or find someone who does, such as an advocate from an organization like The Arc of Washington State.

You will greatly increase your credibility and strengthen your legislative relationships!
The Legislative Hotline

The toll-free Legislative Hotline is a fast way for you to voice your opinions on bills during the legislative session.

When you call the Hotline, an operator will answer and take your message. Your message will be sent to all three of your legislators and the Governor.

When you make a Hotline call, be sure to follow these simple guidelines:
- State your NAME and ADDRESS. If you know the names of your legislators, or district, that’s even better.
- Identify the BILL NUMBER (or budget item) you’re calling about.
- State YOUR POSITION simply. Do you support, oppose or want changes to the bill?

Weekday hours are 8:00 am to 8:00 pm. Saturday hours are 9:00 am to 1:00 pm. DURING LEGISLATIVE SESSION ONLY.

If the Hotline is busy, KEEP TRYING!

The Bill Process

Each session, 2,000 to 3,000 bills are introduced (dropped) but only 10% ever make it into law. To make sure each proposed law is a good idea, bills go through a tough review process. There is a series of cut-off dates for bills to make it out of each committee or the bill dies.

Bills change throughout the process based on what legislators hear from those who speak up. Make sure your voice is heard!
Budget Steps

The state budget process takes place each year. Every odd-numbered year the biennial (two-year) budget is created. In even-numbered years a supplemental budget makes fixes needed for unanticipated issues in the budget.

Start Here

Each Spring, the Governor directs all state agencies to put together decision packages, based on his requests for budget cuts and/or increases.

In the Winter, the Legislature develops budget proposals in response to the Governor’s budget. They have to agree before it can pass and go to the Governor for his signature.

State agencies work during the Summer to deliver their decision packages to the Governor by Fall. This gives him some basis for making his budget proposals.

The Governor decides in the Fall how he wants to spend or save money, based on the information state agencies provide. He sends his budget recommendations to the Legislature in time for legislative session (usually toward the end of December).

Phone Calls, Emails, Mail...

Your phone calls and emails are important, it just takes 10 or 15 calls about a bill (or budget item) and it is considered a landslide of public opinion. Most legislators use email to communicate with their constituents and work on their laptops during committee meetings or on the chamber floor.

Formula for all legislators’ email addresses:

- Legislator’s full first name, followed by dot (.)
- Full last name
- @leg.wa.gov

Example: Thomas.Jefferson@leg.wa.gov

Although email is the best way to communicate during session, when things are happening really fast, a written letter or note can leave a lasting impression. Thank you cards remind legislators that you appreciate what they do.

When the Legislature is not in session, writing a letter or email is a good way for you to share your perspectives about issues in greater depth.

Online Information/Action Center

Opportunities to advocate from your home computer are just one click away when you visit The Arc of Washington State’s Online Action Center. The Action Center provides:

- Action Alerts provide messages to your legislators that you can use as is or edit using your own words. With one click, you can send your message to the appropriate legislator (s).

- Easily send a letter to your state Senator and Representatives, to your Congressional representatives, to the Governor and to other elected officials.

- Letters to the Editor can be very effective in making your personal opinion known to the public to help educate them. At the Legislative Action Center you can submit your letter to five newspapers at once.

- Budget side-by-sides show the contrast between the Governor’s budget proposal, House and Senate proposals, and then the final budget.

- Bills of interest provides a brief summary and links to legislative bill reports and budget overviews.

- Annual Legislative Notebook for Advocates containing one-page information sheets on current issues as well as associated data and charts.

To sign up for Action Alerts, or to write and send letters please visit www.arcwa.org and click on Take Action.

The Art of a Clear Message

When you speak up for yourself, or for others, you are an advocate. Your time with legislators, staff or aides is short, and your message should be too. It’s a good idea to plan one minute, five minute and ten minute versions.

Assume that the person you’re talking to doesn’t know anything about you, your life or the issues that affect your life. To be a good advocate, get your point across with a clear message. Shape your message with three main points:

1. The issue most important to you
2. How this issue affects your life or the lives of others
3. The action or results you are seeking

Be sure your message answers these questions:

- Who are you and where do you live?
- What is important to you and why?
- What action do you want taken?
Statewide Disability Legislative Reception

The 39th Disabilities Legislative Reception is designed to bring legislators and their constituents from all over Washington together to share their perspectives on issues important to individuals with disabilities.

A summary of the issues relevant to people with developmental disabilities will be provided in the afternoon. Go have dinner and then join us at 5:30 back in the Columbia Room on the first floor of the Legislative Building for the Disabilities Legislative Reception.

Using Technology to Advocate

Many legislators use technology to reach their constituents, share their views on issues and quickly work to inform and educate each other.

Facebook pages are a way to share quick thoughts and ideas. The Arc of Washington State has a Facebook page with updates on legislative news, a forum for discussions and links to other advocacy groups. www.facebook.com, search The Arc—Washington State

Twitter is a text base communication in which you send and receive “tweets”, short messages that are 140 characters or less, on your mobile phone or your Twitter online page. You can “follow” The Arc at ArcofWA. (www.twitter.com)

The Olympia Insider YouTube channel provides video coverage of issues and concerns happening in Olympia. (www.youtube.com/user/TheOlympiaInsider)

The Olympia Reporter gives a more in-depth look at what happens each week during legislative session. (www.arcwa.org/arc_insider.htm)

Action Network provides you with email action alerts that offer easy-to-use information for you to make your voice heard.

Advocacy Day

Advocacy Day is a great way to learn about the legislative process. Each Advocacy Day begins with an hour briefing at 10:00 in the morning. The briefing includes:

⇒ Special speakers
⇒ Tips for a successful day
⇒ Inside information on current bills and budget issues

Participants are offered several ways in which to advocate during the afternoon, such as:

⇒ Meeting with legislators or their aides*
⇒ Attending hearings or floor sessions
⇒ Writing and delivering messages to legislators

*Appointments with legislators must be made well in advance. Please contact The Arc of Washington State at 1.888.754.8798 ext. 5 if you need help making your appointments.
