1. Do you have a personal connection or professional experience with someone who has an intellectual/developmental disability (IDD), and if so, would you describe its impact on you? If not, what impact do you want to have for people with IDD and their families?

I do not have a personal or professional experience with someone who has an IDD. The impact I would want to have for people with IDD and their families would be one of inclusion and engagement. I hope to be supportive and accessible to everyone.

2. What are your top three priorities and how would you ensure people with developmental disabilities and their families are included in them? Protecting and enhancing our democracy, growing American manufacturing, transitioning to a green economy. We have left too many people out in the past, with new job opportunities in the coming clean economy we have the chance to rebuild without leaving anyone out!
3. If cuts became necessary due to a recession or economic downturn, how would you protect services that people with IDD and their families need? Government should always protect those who struggle to protect themselves, I will do all I can to provide as much funding as is needed.
4. Is there other information you'd like constituents with developmental disabilities and their family and friends to know? I look forward to meeting with members of The ARC.
